Cal EOC Incident – 2014 Drought

SOC / Inland REOC remains activated in support of 2014 Drought

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Medford Weather:

We are getting low end gales over the waters now, and we will see some gusty winds over our land areas today, but nothing particularly worrisome. The majority of the energy associated with this system has already moved to our north, so we aren't expecting much rain as the front moves inland, in fact, most of the rain will be confined to the coast.

Eureka Weather:

A weak cold front will bring a period of light rain this morning. Another dry day is expected Monday before a more active and wet pattern develops Tuesday and persists through next weekend.

Reno Weather:

Above average temperatures continue through much of the upcoming week. Breezy conditions return by late Tuesday as weak low pressure moves across the Pacific Northwest, with light showers possible in Northeast California. Another weak low pressure may bring showers mainly near the Sierra by Thursday. More active weather is possible next weekend but confidence remains low.

San Francisco Weather:

A weak frontal system may produce a few light showers or sprinkles in the North Bay this morning. Otherwise dry weather is expected to prevail through Monday. Temperatures will warm well above normal by Monday. Dry and warm conditions will continue through midweek except for a slight chance of rain in the North Bay on Tuesday. Rain chances will increase by Thursday and then increase further next weekend when the models indicate a potential change to a wet and stormy weather pattern.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY:

Sacramento Weather:

Mild and dry. A couple of weak waves will brush far Northern California today and Monday, but only expect very light showers across the Coastal Range and into Shasta County mountains. It will be wetter for all areas by the middle of next week.

Hanford Weather:

Dry weather will continue with seasonal temperatures this weekend and a gradual warming trend through Wednesday. A weather system is expected to move across the region with increased precipitation chances on Thursday and cooler temperatures into next weekend.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

Above normal temperatures will continue through Monday along with patchy night and morning fog for some valleys and along the coast. Well above normal temperatures are expected on Tuesday as weak offshore flow develops. A weakening front will bring cooler weather for the second half of next week along with a slight chance of rain on Thursday mainly north of Point Conception.

Extreme Southwestern California including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Inland areas will gradually warm through Tuesday then cool into next weekend. The marine layer and onshore flow will bring areas of night and morning coastal low clouds and fog greatest through Monday and again for the latter half of the week. The lower level flow will be weakly offshore for late Monday and early Tuesday with fewer low clouds for Tuesday and Wednesday.

Southeast California Weather:

High pressure will remain the predominant weather feature through next week allowing temperatures to remain well above normal. With the main storm track staying to our North no rain is currently anticipated through the end of next week.
